REHABILITATION
CONSULTING
& SERVICES
North Dakota Vocational Rehabilitation

As a farmer, rancher, or an individual living in one of North Dakota's many rural towns, you know the many challenges facing the state's agriculture operations. If the challenges facing you today are a permanent illness, injury or impairment, there is a service you can turn to for assistance in keeping you a vital part of North Dakota's agriculture heritage... RCS Rural Services.

Agriculture is more than an industry in North Dakota; it is a heritage, a way of life.

As a farm or ranch operator, you know all too well the many challenges facing your ag operation, not the least of which is trying economic conditions.

After all, the economies of North Dakota's small towns are largely dependant on the success of the farmer and rancher. The North Dakota farmer and rancher is at the heart of our rural economy.

It is important that all North Dakotans work together to ensure that North Dakota farmers and ranchers continue to meet the challenges of today's world.

Partnership makes the difference.

A partner in the RCS Rural Services process is the North Dakota Department of Agriculture.

Their expertise in agriculture-related issues is critical to us providing you the best possible options from which you can make an informed choice.

Your permanent injury, illness, or impairment may be causing more than just physical or psychological stress. It may also be causing financial stress on your farm or ranch operation.

As a service to you and as part of our process, the department's ag mediators help us to understand these key issues related to your farm or ranch. Their efforts can have a positive impact on your ag operation.

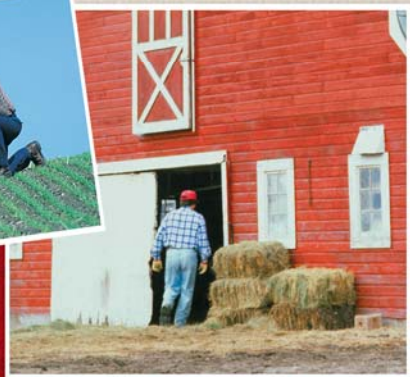

Remember, RCS Rural Services is here to help you remain an active partner in North Dakota's ag industry and economic future.

RCS Rural Services is here to help.

Rehabilitation Consulting & Service Rural Services are available to farmers, ranchers, and people living in the rural communities who are experiencing difficulties doing their job because of a permanent injury, illness, or impairment.

We help North Dakota ag operations and other rural businesses to keep operating. By doing so, they can remain an important partner in North Dakota's future.

Most RCS Rural Services are provided to eligible individuals at no cost. However, some services are based on a sliding fee scale, so there may be a minimal cost to the individual.

How RCS Rural Services works.

After your initial contact with RCS, we will visit your farm or ranch to review daily work tasks with you to identify problem work areas. We will ask questions like:

- Do you have difficulties opening gates?
- Do you have difficulties hearing others around you?
- Do you have difficulties climbing grain bins, or getting in and out of farm machinery such as tractors, combines or grain trucks?

We will then identify potential solutions to these problem areas. These potential solutions may include:

- Equipment modifications
- Assistive technology
- Training

Finally, we will conduct follow-up to make sure that the solution put into place is working for you. After all, success comes through a partnership between you and RCS.

We listen and learn.

We listen to what you are telling us. Sometimes simple solutions are the best, and they only come from understanding how you do your work.

We work hard to ensure that we have the latest information and resources so, by working together, an informed choice can be made on the most effective solution.

As you do with your farm and ranch operations, we seek help from experts in a variety of fields. While you may seek advice from county extension agents and farm lenders, we may consult with medical professionals, assistive technology specialists, and fabricators to determine the best solution for you.
